What If ?

... You knew as much about the internet as your kids do?

As your children interact on the internet, you need to be aware that they may be exposed to people who don't have your child's best interests in mind. Caution your child about giving out too much information when communicating with people online. Consistently monitor your child's internet activity.

Learn about the internet . . and know how your kids are using it.

Communication is an effective tool for parents and guardians when helping their children avoid the dangers that exist on the internet. Protect your children from the online world just as you would from the outside world.
